

The 257B has a tantalum plate which makes an excellent tuning indicator. Since maximum antenna output always occurs at the point of minimum plate color, this form of tuning is more convenient and more accurate than the indication of a milliammeter in the plate or cathode circuit. The current dip is rather small at the point of resonance in a pentode tube when proper load is coupled into the tank circuit.